The exterior renovation for the Chestnut Park elderly housing project included new roofing, new exterior cedar shingles, and new vinyl doors and windows. The existing siding failed over time and was removed down to the sheathing. The material that was selected to achieve the natural wood look for the facade was pre-stained white cedar shingles. The existing windows and doors were replaced with low maintenance insulating glass products. The project came in below budget and the residents and the Housing Authority appreciated the quality of the design.
